President's Message

Christine Morgan
June 2017

Summer weather has finally come to Minnesota (sort of)!

Even though we are technically on “summer break”, HLAA-TC has a lot going on behind the scenes.

The 2017 National Convention in Utah is later this month. For information on the 2018 convention dates and site, look inside this newsletter. You may just want to plan ahead.

The Board and conference planning committee is working hard on the Living Well with Hearing Loss conference to be held in St. Louis Park in lieu of the November meeting. We also want to thank those HLAA-TC members who volunteered to help. This is a large fundraising project for our chapter. If you have not already given Lionel (the committee chair) your name, be sure to e-mail him soon at secretary@hlaatc.org

Our next chapter meeting is September 16 with a presentation on Tonal Distortion. This is another one of those not-to-be missed presentations. The slate of presentations is almost complete. We have a great variety of speakers and subject matter.

Thanks everyone for all your hard work and dedication. Special thanks to our Board, newsletter editor, photographer, greeters, transcribers, webmaster, and volunteers. Each and every one of you helps keep our chapter strong and viable.

With gratitude and affection,

Christine

May Meeting Summary

Kathleen Marin

Vice President Kathleen Marin opened the meeting at 10 am and introduced the speaker, Tony Strong, the national sales manager with Williams Sound. Williams Sound is one of the manufacturers of audio equipment that allows venues to be in compliance with ADA rules for equal access for people with hearing loss. Tony reminded us of the importance of advocating for ourselves, letting our legislators know our needs, and speaking up at specific venues as well. He also put hearing loss in perspective, noting that if all the people in the world suffering from hearing loss lived in one country, it would be the third most populous country, right behind China and India. There are a lot of us out there, and our population is growing. In the US, this is being driven by the baby boomers.

Tony explained looping and t-coils. A t-coil is a bound copper bobbin of wire that receives an electromagnetic signal and transmits it directly to our ears through our pre-programmed hearing aids. It is embedded in the hearing aid, unless the hearing aid is too tiny (like in the canal hearing aids), and must be activated by an audiologist. The electromagnetic signal comes from a wire which is buried in the floor around the perimeter of the room and which is taking audio from a sound board and microphone. The t-coil only works when there is an induction loop in place. If the t-coil doesn't fit in a hearing aid, it is possible to have it in a remote control or other device and still get its benefit.

There is little to no consistency across hearing aids in how they work and how they interface with other devices. There is no set of standards for their manufacture. Some have Bluetooth capability but no t-coils. They can be paired with your cell phone, TV, car or other equipment but don't work with induction loops in public settings. Instead, the cell phone can pick up the audio either through a wi-fi hotspot if the venue is broadcasting in wi-fi or through an adapter that is a loop receiver.

It is also possible to use a counter loop, such as at the library, bank teller or grocery checkout. In addition, room loops are available for use at home, such as at the dining room table or for watching TV.

Tony brought examples of a variety of equipment for us to look at and try out. He showed us the wire used in looping, examples of personal amplifiers with and without t-coil capability, and different types of microphones that could be used with the amplifiers, depending on the situation. It was helpful to see the technology.

Tony concluded by saying that all of these technologies will continue to be used in the future: induction looping, wi-fi, Bluetooth, FM receivers, tablets or laptops and captioning.

After the break, Kathleen talked about advocating, including the positive response from the Minneapolis Institute of Art to her request for captioning the videos in a new display. She also offered to go with anyone who wanted to request better accommodations, since it can be intimidating to have to do it alone. If you want her support, email her at vicepresident@hlaatc.org to set up a time.

Secretary Lionel Locke talked about the conference entitled Living Well with Hearing Loss that our chapter will be putting on in November during our regularly scheduled meeting time. This will be an opportunity to talk to vendors about the latest technology. This conference will be our fundraiser instead of the Walk4Hearing. We need volunteers, both now and especially during the conference. Please help. Lionel also summarized an article in this month's Scientific American, describing how people do not protect themselves from dangerously loud noise, such as lawn mower, power tools, appliances, rock concerts, etc. This will lead to even more hearing loss. Current research is suggesting that 1 in 5 people in their 20's now have hearing loss, not just baby boomers. Finally, the bills to (1) provide training in hearing loss to people who work in nursing homes and other long-term care facilities and (2) provide good acoustics and loops in buildings receiving state funding both passed this year. That is excellent news.

Kathleen adjourned the meeting at noon. We will meet again on September 16. Enjoy the summer!

Four Star Restaurant

By Kathleen Marin

Last week, we went to dinner at our neighborhood Applebee's and, as always, I explained about my hearing loss and asked for a quiet table away from the bar. The hostess nodded and said she had another patron who also requested the same. She seated us at a corner booth and then volunteered to turn down the music, as she could control the speaker in that particular area! I didn't even have to ask.

Later, someone turned the volume back up, she noticed, came to our table to apologize for that and then went to turn it down again. This was an amazing response, and demonstrates that our advocacy is working. People are starting to understand our needs for quieter areas and to respect them and accommodate us. I also want to mention that the TVs were captioned. Applebee's got four stars for service that day.

Hot Off the Press! Save the Date!

Christine T. Morgan

I just got some insider information which will not be announced until the 2017 HLAA convention in Salt Lake City later in June. The 2018 HLAA convention will be held in Minneapolis at the Hyatt Regency on Nicollet Mall!

Wow! This and the Super Bowl in Minneapolis in the same year!

This is a great opportunity to have the convention in our own city, especially for those who for one reason or another have been unable to travel to the national conventions. So save the dates: June 21-24, 2018.

Further details will be shared as I receive them.

NOVEMBER 18, 2017

Greetings to our membership and friends of HLAA-TC. Please mark on your Fall calendar the above date and get ready to enjoy information on hearing loss, technology options and resources provided by our many exhibitors and guest speakers.
